Maybe You Don't Need to File for Guardianship

What: A 1-hour presentation by an attorney from the Michigan Elder Justice Initiative about common issues that lead to the filing of an adult guardianship petition and possible quicker, cheaper, and less restrictive solutions to those problems.

Who should attend: people who have filed a petition for adult guardianship or conservatorship; or who are thinking about filing a petition for adult guardianship or conservatorship.

Why: Guardians and conservators limit people's treasured right to make decisions for themselves. The court should only appoint them if they are absolutely necessary. Connecting the person to services and programs in the community might be a better way to help the person address the challenges in their life while maintaining their dignity and independence.
